The Glorious Fourth.

How Cloverport Enjoyed Herself on the Anniversary of Independence.

The big Catholic picnic at LaHeist Park was a success in more than one direction.

As a social recreation for persons who probably had been closely confined to business affairs since Independence Day was here before, it was delightful; as an opportunity to listen to some of the best informed men display their oratory on the political issues of the day, it was splendid; and as a means by which the building fund of the church was augmented, it was a success.

The day was cloudy and comfortable, not threatening and more than two thousand people embraced the favorable opportunity of passing a day in pleasant social recreation. Early in the morning people began to pour in in carts, carriages, wagons, on horseback and afoot, and the arrival of the trains tended to swell the crowd considerably.

It was on the program that Hon. David R. Murray would address the assembly in the afternoon, but on the arrival of Mr. Murray the night before, this had to be changed, so that he could speak at LaHeist Park in the forenoon, and at Hardinsburg in the afternoon. He mounted the rostrum about 10:30 o'clock and for three-quarters of an hour poured from his eloquent lips such a stream of touching oratory that his hearers were completely captivated. His words sank deep into the hearts of his home people and carried conviction with them. There was probably not a soul within the sound of his voice but that already loved him as a brother, but this speech was a renewal of plighted faith.

The people of Cloverport and Breckenridge county were proud to know that a son of their soil had been so honorably and warmly received in other parts of the Fourth Congressional District. On the 11 o'clock train the Hon. P. Watt Hardin, Democratic candidate for Governor, arrived. He took the stand at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and delivered one of those short, sweet speeches for which he is so famous. The most flowery eloquence poured from his lips in a continuous flow, and he closed his remarks with a most happy compliment to the ladies.

Mr. Hardin was followed by Judge John Allen Murray, Democratic nominee for Judge of Breckenridge county, who made one of his usual logical talks. Everything during the entire day, whether for entertainment or amusement, was on first-class order. The music, both brass and string bands, were good. The dinner was excellent and Father Niehaus and the committee of management were complimented on every hand.

Probably two or three hundred people went to Tar Springs on the Fourth and picnicked under the shade of those beautiful forest trees. The children romped through the woods, over the cliffs, across the ravines and all had a general good time.

Aside from these places of amusement, hundreds of people never left the streets of Cloverport, but remained in town all day, occasionally regaling themselves with a cold drink at the various bars, though there was not an intoxicated person in the city.

GETTING HOTTER.

"Correspondent" Writes Again in His Usual Enthusiastic, Vigorous Style.

And Whacks Montgomery and the Ring Politicians Right and Left.

MURRAY IS THE CRY.

ELIZABETHTOWN, KY., July 7, 1894.—

EDITOR NEWS—Since my last letter to your excellent paper Mr. McKay has been on and off the track for Congress. You will remember that I foreshadowed his coming into the race in the interest of Mr. Montgomery. I was able to do this because I had heard of the result of the secret conclave of the triumvirate which sat at the Custom-house in Louisville immediately preceding his announcement. But the scheme would not work worth a cent. It died "bornin'." They soon learned that the people could not be stuffed in this manner. They were indeed sorely perplexed and greatly befuddled.

But what was their next step? Why, sir, mirabile dictu, inside of two days after they had got him on they began to consider the best plan to get him off, when they fell upon the plan of belittling his candidacy. It was announced by "the custom house clique" that McKay's candidacy was the very essence of the wildest dream; a delusion of a back number in politics, that he would not get a half dozen votes in his own county, etc. Of course this was done to try to convey the impression to the people that they had nothing to do with his candidacy and were as averse to it as the strongest Murray advocate.

But they have miserably failed in their schemes all 'round so far and from the present outlook they will be thoroughly convinced on the 4th of August that honesty is indeed the best policy. Before bidding the "clique" a final adieu I wish to call their attention to a bit of verse that my muse has dedicated to them:

We thought we had a nice, clear track,
But now "A lack a day,"
They've got Dave Murray on the track,
And on the track to stay.

Aye, stay indeed, just as you say,
Tho' 'twas late to begin
Dave's not only on the track to stay,
But also on to win.

Chorus.
Then skip out, boys! Montgomery's gone!
Our tricks are at an end!
For Murray is a winner sure,
In spite of every dollar we can spend.

Good-bye, Ben Johnson and Dave May,
Cur Richardson and clique,
The PEOPLE soon will have their say,
Then you will feel quite sick.

Then celebrate! Roll out the gun,
Ram well and let her bang!
The PEOPLE triumph! They have won!
Bye bye, Aleck, and your "ratty" gang.

Chorus.
Then skip out, boys! Montgomery's gone!
Our tricks are at an end!
For Murray is a winner sure,
In spite of every dollar we can spend.

But I started to write you a letter, so I shall proceed without ceremony.

Among the many causes of the wild dismay that has settled on the countenances of the Bourbons, and which appears to give them as much concern as anything else, is the determination of those who failed to receive any "pie" to vote for Murray and give him their influence. Nor are they to blame, if all reports of Montgomery's manner of endorsing applicants for position, especially in the revenue service, be true. It is said his plan was to endorse every Democrat who applied for a place, but had a secret understanding with the appointing power as to who were to get the places. It is furthermore charged that the motto was to "put none but original Montgomery men on duty." No matter how good a Democrat one might be, and however meritorious and how much good he had done for the party, if he had not always been for Montgomery he was to get left. These are ugly charges from the many who failed and I tell you they are making their count too.

Our people here say that it is plainly noticeable that the present Representative is very tired of the old, spotted silver coat he has worn so long, and seeks the old harp of a thousand strings for campaign thunder. He is not fond of being asked about his voting for unconditional repeal of the Sherman law and about his voting against Mills for Speaker. He prefers to tell what great violence has been done to the Wilson bill by a few United States Senators, and proceeds to "roast" them in every speech he makes, or in every talk he has for publication. It is intimated that this arraignment of these Senators in season and out of season is for the purpose of covering up his lack of good faith to his constituents in not supporting Mills. But it will not avail. You see we have the Courier-Journal to enlighten us and it says, "The Wilson bill was far enough from what it should have been and badly needed a certificate of character." No body has been so mislead at any time as to think the Wilson bill is satisfactory to the Democratic hosts and for Mr. Montgomery to be making such a racket about it looks like he is insincere and has some of the characteristics of the skuttle fish, which colors the waters to hide in when pursued. Returning to the silver question before I close this rather lengthy letter I desire to say that the people here think very strange of the reason Mr. Montgomery gave to a colleague for voting against silver, when asked why he did so, said he, "The foreign powers must be conciliated." Shades of Washington, Jefferson and Jackson! How does this sound coming from an American?

Shall it be said that this district would return a man to Congress who would give utterance to such an un-patriotic, un-American sentiment? Must we be represented by a man who has no faith in the resources and independence of his country? By a man who is more concerned about "Foreign Powers" than he is about his own native land? I think not. Daylight is dawning and we now see plainly "whereas before we saw as through a glass darkly." Murray is the cry nor will it cease 'till the hills and the valleys catch up the refrain and herald it abroad in deafening echoes that the old Fourth is once more independent and free.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Holdeman and little daughter, of Cave-in-Rock, Ill., are in the county visiting relatives. They arrived in this city Monday and paid a pleasant visit to this office. Mr. Holdeman left here several years ago in the employ of the Cincinnati Cigar Company and went to Cave-in-Rock. He afterward embarked in the general merchandising business at that place, and his many friends in this county will be pleased to know that he has so prospered that he is now one of the largest merchants of the town.
